Smoke and Orb of Dreams hamper opponents significantly, helping to curb aggression that will inevitably come our way. This deck is not going to make friends, and outside of In Garruk's Wake and Plague Wind, black and red don't have a lot of semi-conditional boardwipes like white does. Instead, the plan here is to tap down creatures and shut off haste on opposing threats.

The folks at Harper's Bazaar made this mistake in 1984, and the outrage was swift in coming, forcing the editor-in-chief to issue a half-assed apology in the next issue. "I offer my sincere apologies," he probably wrote, "ideally, the ad department would be doing this, but they were all busy videotaping the ball pit at a Chuck E. Cheese for ...
